A Message From the President

“Hats off to the alumni groups around the country that are stepping up to help represent us at recruiting events in their regions.

Fellow alumni, I want to express my appreciation for your continuing engagement with Michigan State. With our capital campaign drawing to a successful close, the results speak volumes about Spartans' devotion to this university.

Michigan State is making great strides in reforming processes and practices to be as safe, responsive, and worthy of your support as it can be. Even as we mutually reflect and assess, our indomitable Spartan Will carries us forward.

We see confidence in MSU reflected in this year's record enrollment. We welcomed the university's largest incoming undergraduate class to campus, 8,442 new students, for a total enrollment of 50,351—our second-largest ever.

Clearly, MSU continues to be highly valued by families in Michigan and beyond. The average high school grade point average for our freshmen this fall was 3.73, continuing its steady increase, and Honors College enrollment totaled 724—a record for the entering class!

It is also our most diverse class, with a record 26.3 percent who are students of color, and an all-time high 4,415 women. We also welcomed 1,590 transfer students, and between new and transfer students, nearly 80 percent are from Michigan.

Though we are excited about this record-setting class, we realize we have much work to do to continue attracting future Spartans. Institutions throughout the country are facing enrollment declines as high school graduate numbers drop. In Michigan, we project 15 percent fewer high school graduates in the next 10 years.

With another foreseen drop underway in international student enrollments throughout much of higher education, Michigan State is stepping up recruiting in other states. We are addressing out-of-state tuition costs by offering new scholarship incentives to domestic students, and have added regional admissions representatives in the Florida, Atlanta, and Ohio markets. Hats off to the alumni groups around the country that are stepping up to help represent us at recruiting events in their regions.

This challenge, too, will be overcome by Spartans working together. Go green!

YOUR VOICES

We received a record number of letters from readers since the summer release of Spartan magazine. It's nice to hear from so many of you. And it's an honor to be able to share your thoughts with everyone in our audience, which includes alumni, faculty, staff, students, and friends. We hope this section of the magazine continues to be a place where you can share your opinions, comments, and suggestions. To steal a line from the late Dean Martin, "Keep those cards and letters coming."

DISAPPOINTED

Just wanted to register my disappointment with Mr. Engler's directive to change the focus of this issue of the alumni magazine. The university had an opportunity to send a strong message here, and this is a huge disappointment. I hope that the editorial staff will be given more autonomy in the future.

MSU is an affirmative-action, equal-opportunity employer.

the wake of the Nassar revelations.

As a proud graduate of the MSU School of Journalism, I take particular offense, as my household donations go to fund the incredible storytelling of the Spartan alumni magazine and do so because of the topical relevance as well as the clear research and thoughtfulness that go into every story.

These are the values I was taught as a writer—to report the truth, no matter how uncomfortable.

The administration's blatant attempts to turn the magazine into a propaganda machine to appease donors are ridiculous. The donors are already PISSED that this happened in the first place.

That the culture at MSU has always been to hide and control the message as we saw play out during the trial.

We don't need more of it. We need transparency, accountability and a culture shift that starts at the TOP.

If this doesn't happen, you can bet donor dollars will go elsewhere. I say I am a proud grad. But right now I am heartbroken. This is not how #SpartansWill.

HOPEFUL

Awesome issue. Go Green. Anyone who deserts MSU in its time of need is not a true Spartan. All of my Spartan friends are 100 percent on board. One bad apple (Nassar) doesn't make the whole bushel bad. Really loved the issue.

Mary A. Mendendorp

CULTURE CHANGE IS NEEDED

I realize that Interim President Engler needs to put the university in a positive light (as does the alumni magazine, to some extent), but he's kidding himself if he thinks MSU "has emerged from the most difficult challenge in its history."

That challenge is ongoing, and we won't emerge until it's clear that the actions he is taking are succeeding in changing the culture. Go green.

Keith Langham, '73
NORTHVILLE

WE ARE APPALLED

We are retired faculty members, apparently receiving the magazine because of our contributions to the university. We were appalled when we learned that acting president Engler was able to influence you to not publish essays from the concerned and distraught alumni (and to publish the "pap" interview with Mr. Engler).

We are not interested in having any of the money that we donate to the university be used to fund this kind of uncritical public relations effort in the face of VERY serious issues facing the university.

We will not get past the problems that have plagued the university in recent times until we confront them directly.

We need to be able to hear all voices, not just those managed by an administration that has already demonstrated an inability to listen with an open ear.

Jim and Rose Zacks, faculty
OKEMOS

WE WILL GET THROUGH THIS

From the time I was young, I can remember someone always trying to molest me. Family members, my youth leader, my pastor, supervisors, etc.

My daughter, her daughter, and I have all gone through this. I share this because the good news is, finally, we can talk about it and many more victims know it's not their fault.

I hope things will continue progressing, and many more survivors will realize that they will get through this and do better than ever. They brought down the wall of shame for many, and some very powerful people now are being held accountable.

I'm proud that a very old and painful subject is coming to the forefront, and while we may not find the best solutions the first time, we will keep working and get through this. It was a long time coming. Go green, go white.

Jan

RESTORE INDEPENDENCE

I was disgusted to learn that Engler canceled your appropriate response to the Nassar disaster.

It's time the alumni magazine returned to its independent status as it existed many years ago. Engler should be fired. He is an embarrassment to the university and has to go.

I will not be making any contributions to MSU as long as Engler is in office.

Linda Lacey, '65
HAMILTON

TO THE CONTRARY

The cover of the summer 2018 Spartan quoted Interim President John Engler inferring that MSU is now past “this Nassar thing” (as a board member called it).

Mr. Engler stated the university has “emerged” and is now stronger, safer, etc.

I don’t believe anything could be further from the truth. I think that their plan of action (or inaction) includes “circling the wagons,” i.e., putting as many MSU people in investigative and administrative positions as possible; delaying and protracting the selection of a new president (who will probably have a strong MSU connection); having some kind of excuse to delay payment to the aggrieved parties; and finally, waiting long enough until the whole thing blows over.

This seems to be their strategy, which I don’t think will work. Unless the university aggressively attempts to find out (up and down the line) who knew what and when, and then deal appropriately with them, there will be the dark “Nassar cloud” hanging over the entire university. This is a situation that requires serious investigation, not just new positions and platitudes.

I don’t see a real investigation happening. Until it does, those now in charge are doing long-term damage to the reputation of a premier land-grant university.

F. Craig Schley, '64
HARRISON TOWNSHIP

GRATEFUL FOR STATE NEWS

I am so thankful for the strength and independence of The State News. The “original” issue of the June ’18 Spartan magazine was a window into the variety of healing processes being attempted on campus. Mr. Engler’s decision to “overthrow” that issue and focus on only “good news” was just one more example of this administration’s inability to help all of us heal from this trauma.

Kristi Kline, '82
MIDLAND

MSU WILL ENDURE

While the actions of Larry Nassar have been devastating to MSU (and those who survived his abuse), they are not the first challenges over which the university has prevailed. May I remind you that in:

1863—The University of Michigan engaged in a full assault on the formation of MSU’s predecessor, MAC.

1865, 1867, 1869—The nascent MAC was just getting truly established in East Lansing when bills were introduced in each of these legislative sessions to close MAC and allocate its funding to U-M.

1916—A fire completely destroyed the Engineering Building on campus, just as the facility was scheduled to greatly expand.

The University of Michigan had been actively campaigning for six years to close MAC’s rapidly-growing Engineering School and move the dedicated funds into Ann Arbor (U-M now wanted MAC to only offer programs in Agriculture).

1939 - 1950—MSC engaged in an ongoing campaign to become a member of the Big Ten Conference. Throughout this time frame, steady opposition to MSC membership by the University of Michigan was skillfully overcome by MSC’s popular and visionary president, John A. Hannah.

Had U-M succeeded, today’s MSU would look very different; Big Ten membership helped to transform the university. MSU will prevail.

Dave Kirkpatrick, '82

DON’T FORGET THE ARCHITECTS

“Building a New Future,” in the Summer 2018 issue (and the article on the new building at the College of Music) made for good reading for this architect.

I was greatly disappointed, however, to read not a single mention of architects or engineers. Buildings don’t design themselves—they take prodigious energy and creative work on the part of talented professionals to ensure that they accommodate well complex functions, the physical context, and a sense of pleasure in appearance.

As you wouldn’t discuss a book without mention of its author, or a painting without crediting the artist, please in future be sure to connect campus buildings to their architects and consultants. They deserve credit for their work.

Shadows

Timeless Spartan touchstones

“...When from these scenes we wander
And twilight shadows fade,
Our mem’ry still will linger
Where light and shadows played;
...In the evening ‘oft we’ll gather
And pledge our faith anew,
Sing our love for Alma Mater
And thy praises, MSU.”

A Theory of Wind

BY DAN GERBER, '62

for Django

The oxygen that the trees conceive out of sunlight backs up in the branches of a single oak.

A still morning, dead calm,
a new day just beginning to penetrate the fog.

Maybe a crow calls to remind you
you are listening,
that the silence itself is a kind of song.

And then one tiny leaf starts to quiver.

The leaf, moved by your attention, gives a little wave
and happens to brush another leaf, and together they make a voice.

This glad commotion spreads along the limb till the tree can't contain itself any more than you can keep from hearing it or feeling its breath on your face.

You are absolved of all responsibility now,
as the whole tree takes up this song,

which leaps like flame to the oak next door, while the startled pine tries to hush it and only makes matters worse from the standpoint of stillness.

If you get down close to the ground now you will hear how the normally complacent grass is also infected.

You've seen it fan out in great swoops,
Like a blush on the face of the sea.

YOU'VE GOT MAIL

Want to be a better boss? Check your email less often. MSU research shows that keeping up with email traffic places high demands on managers, which prevents them from achieving their goals and from being good leaders.

The study is one of the first to examine how distractions from email impact managers, their productivity, and their role as leaders. Results show that employees spend more than 90 minutes every day—or seven-and-a-half hours every week—recovering from email interruptions. Managers are no different, and their distractions have further-reaching implications.

"When managers are the ones trying to recover from email interruptions, they fail to meet their goals, neglect job responsibilities, and their subordinates don't have the leadership behavior they need to thrive," said MSU Broad College of Business Professor Russell Johnson.

HAPPY 50TH

The Center for Service-Learning and Civic Engagement, the oldest continuously operating service-learning center in the nation, is celebrating its 50th anniversary. The center works on campus to offer reciprocal, quality, service-learning and civic engagement opportunities linking faculty and students with community partners. To help keep track of it all, the center released a new app, MSU Civic Life. It allows students, faculty, and staff to record their acts of civic engagement and volunteer activities. Find it at the Apple and Google Play stores.

SIX FEET UNDER

Road work last summer uncovered a visual reminder of our agricultural roots. Archaeology students came to the rescue. Together they unearthed the remains: scores of large and small bones that formed an old cow's skeleton. Bone spurs and worn teeth gave the animal's age away. The farm animal may have belonged to the Biebesheimer family, who settled the area in the mid-1800s. Researchers hope more testing on related remains will yield evidence of the era's indigenous plant species.

Let's Talk Food

Pull up a chair to our table

Are you confused about what to put on your plate? Most of us are.

That's why MSU has launched Our Table, an initiative through which scientists and consumers engage in meaningful dialogue to sort through all of the information and misinformation surrounding food.

They gather for round-table conversations on such topics as food access, food waste, and the science behind GMOs.

Science writer Sheril Kirshenbaum moderates the discussions with farmers, scientists, health professionals, and community members seated around a custom wooden table made through the forestry program.

The initiative, backed by MSU AgBioResearch—a group of 340 researchers from eight different colleges across campus—also involves a survey every spring and fall. The MSU Food Literacy and Engagement Poll tracks consumer attitudes related to food. It's consistently revealed most Americans have questions about where their food comes from and they're unsure where to find credible answers.

Kirshenbaum and WKAR's All Things Considered host Karel Vega have also teamed up on a related radio show, Serving Up Science.

It explores food topics in short, easy-to-understand segments. A complementary digital video series is also in development.

By 2050, the world population is expected to exceed 9 billion. To feed a population that size, food production will need to increase by 70 to 100 percent. In response, MSU has expanded its presence in key food-producing regions of the world, including the U.S., Africa, Asia, and Central America. Our scientists are tackling challenges posed by population growth, climate change, and persistent malnutrition, especially among children and women. "MSU knows food," said Ronald Hendrick, dean of the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources. "It harkens back to why the university was founded, and where we are headed in the future."

Tracking basketball data is a hobby for Kevin Pauga, but his massive “matrix” has gained a serious following

NEW HALL OF FAMERS

Jimmy Raye ('71, football), and Bill

Wehrwein ('71, MA '79, track & field).

At age 5, he was color-coding the TV Guide, looking for scheduling patterns. At 14, he was creating his hometown's Little League baseball schedule.

Now, Kevin Pauga, '04, is a star in the fanatical sphere of college basketball analytics.

As assistant athletic director for administration, Pauga masterminds the men's basketball team's schedule, travel, budget, and summer camps. But his skills outside of work are gaining attention.

While still a senior in the College of Communication Arts and Sciences, Pauga created his own method of dissecting teams' data and predicting future performances. Ever since, he's been adding slews of information to a massive Excel file, which he calls “the master schedule.”

He's dubbed it the KPI. And it's landed him in the stratosphere of older, revered forecasters, or “mathletes.”

KPI has garnered headlines in The New York Times, The Wall Street Journal, ESPN.com, and Sports Illustrated. Even the NCAA is taking note.

But Pauga just does it for fun. In 2014, he started posting KPI online for free.

“KPI quantifies what every individual win and every individual loss means, with the idea that rather than giving a team's ranking, it's ranking a team's entire résumé—from best win to worst loss. That makes it a little more exacting than other long-established formulas,” he said.

Next time you see him, try to imagine what he might be tracking as the matrix grows, one game at a time.

BOUND BY LOVE

When you're ailing, wrapping yourself in a handmade quilt can be more comforting than sipping a cup of grandma's chicken soup. The quilting community has long understood this. Now, a new book, Quilts and Health, displays photographs and artists' statements about more than 100 textile creations addressing illness, health, hope, and grief. The book's cover depicts the quilt shown here. Three MSU women scholars collaborated on the endeavor. Co-authors are: MSU Professor Marsha MacDowell; her sister Clare Luz, an MSU assistant professor of family medicine specializing in gerontology; and Beth Donaldson, MSU coordinator of the Quilt Index—affiliated with the MSU Museum. Quilters possess special powers. A number of them have stitched together moving creations in response to a loved one's illness, disease, or disability. African-American artist Marion Coleman memorializes Nelson Mandela's legacy in "HIV Positive: Reaching for a Cure." You'll find it within the pages of Quilts and Health (see sidebar, left), which explores quilting as an art form and a therapy for both a creator and the recipient of a quilt. The beautifully illustrated book attests to the healing power of love and art.

ENHANCING HUMANITIES

A new endowed position has been created at MSU to focus on the holistic well-being of students through spiritual development. The chair is one of 105 new endowed faculty positions established during MSU's Empower Extraordinary campaign. The Foglio Chair of Spirituality—in the College of Arts and Letters—honors the Rev. Jake Foglio, an alumnus, former faculty member, long-time priest, and mentor to countless MSU student-athletes and coaches. Now retired, Father Jake formerly served in the St. John Church and Student Center. He previously assisted with medical behavioral science teaching and counseling in the College of Human Medicine.

Real Estate Magnate Means Business

Developer Edward J. Minskoff makes largest private gift in university's history

"To say that Edward Minskoff is a developer would be like saying Picasso was a painter."

That's how the New York Sun once described Minskoff, '62 (Business), one of America's preeminent developers.

His portfolio includes roughly 40 million square feet of real estate. But the Spartan philanthropist has never forgotten his alma mater.

In September, he gave $30 million toward the Business Pavilion at the Eli Broad College of Business. His gift to MSU is the largest single gift ever from an individual.

Minskoff is known for building landmark spaces that radiate elegance and style. His aesthetic concern is central to his intent. "Buildings are an art form," he told the Sun.

And art is his passion: ARTnews has listed Minskoff and his wife, Julie, among the world's top 200 art collectors.

Minskoff's financial support to his alma mater began in 1964.

Today, the Julie and Edward J. Minskoff Gallery in the Eli and Edythe Broad Art Museum is named in their honor. Mr. Minskoff lent his expertise to MSU during construction of the Zaha Hadid-designed art museum. The university bestowed upon him an honorary doctorate of business degree in 2009.

IN HONOR OF SURVIVORS

The University Museum is preserving more than 200 teal mesh bows tied to trees last winter in tribute to young women who'd survived sexual abuse by former physician Larry Nassar. The adornments were removed after foliage-damaging gypsy moths began nesting in them. Museum staff will assist survivors and their parents in creating an upcoming exhibit including the bows and other poignant reminders.

MSU NAMES CCO TO LEAD NEW OFFICE

Marilyn Tarrant has been named an associate vice president and permanent head of the newly organized Office of Audit, Risk and Compliance. She will report directly to the Board of Trustees and the president. The new office will be responsible for the continued development of the MSU ethics and compliance program with a strong framework for identifying, prioritizing, and managing risk. This will include revising the university's policies to provide clear ethical principles and behavioral expectations for all MSU employees.

SEARCH FIRM SELECTED

Storbeck/Pimentel and Associates is leading the search for MSU's 21st president. A woman- and minority-owned company, it specializes in higher education executive searches. The firm has extensive experience conducting presidential searches on behalf of public research universities. "Their proven ability to identify and recruit candidates from diverse backgrounds is particularly helpful for organizations seeking change," said Dianne Byrum, MSU trustee and presidential search committee co-chair.

Presidential Search Committee Named

19-member panel will gather community input

The MSU Board of Trustees has assembled a 19-member search committee to help find a permanent replacement for Interim President John Engler.

Committee members were chosen to represent a range of constituencies and a variety of disciplines.

They will gather input from faculty, staff, students, and alumni to develop a set of criteria for selecting the university's next leader, who will be elected by the BOT.

The board anticipates announcing that decision in June 2019.

The committee will be co-chaired by MSU Trustees Dianne Byrum, '74, and Melanie Foster, '77. Alumna Teresa A. Sullivan, '70, '14, former president of the University of Virginia, is serving as an adviser to the co-chairs.

The other members are:

- Debra Bittner, '84, president, Coalition of Labor Organizations at MSU
- Pero Gaglo Dagbovie, '93, '95, University Distinguished Professor of history and associate dean, Graduate School
- Prabu David, dean, College of Communication Arts and Sciences
- Joel Ferguson, MSU Trustee, '65
- Mary Finn, director and professor, School of Criminal Justice
- Thomas Glasmacher, laboratory and project director, Facility for Rare Isotope Beams and University Distinguished Professor
- Linda Hubbard, '82, president and COO, Carhartt, Inc.
- Tomas Hult, Byington Endowed Chair and director, International Business Center in the Eli Broad College of Business
- Dan Kelly, MSU Trustee

- Leo Kempel, dean, College of Engineering
- Bonnie Knutson, '78, '82, professor, School of Hospitality Business
- Wanda Lipscomb, '78, associate professor, Department of Psychiatry, and senior associate dean for Diversity & Inclusion, College of Human Medicine
- Mark A. Murray, '76, '79, past president, Grand Valley State University
- David L. Porteous, '74, Board of Directors of Huntington Bancshares Inc. and past MSU Trustee
- Katherine Rifiotis, president, Associated Students of Michigan State University
- Gregory J. Spray, '14, doctoral candidate, Department of Communicative Sciences and Disorders, College of Communication Arts and Sciences
- Felicia Wu, John A. Hannah Distinguished Professor of Food Science and Human Nutrition and Agricultural, Food, and Resource Economics.

Health Care Practice Restructured

Change expands clinical, research opportunities

The Board of Trustees has approved the creation of a new organization that encompasses MSU's colleges of Human Medicine, Osteopathic Medicine, and Nursing.

The new entity, called MSU Health Care, replaces the current MSU HealthTeam, and will serve as a multi-specialty group practice of the university.

It will be a separate 501(c)(3) organization that can form joint ventures with a broader range of other health care entities, including area hospitals, to help nurture a culture of safety, foster cost-efficient clinical practice, and increase research opportunities. Additionally, MSU Health Care can work with medical practice partners to provide more health care services.

MSU Health Care will include 260 providers from 14 clinical departments at MSU, including doctors, nurses, psychologists, social workers, therapists, and nutritionists.

The board also approved changes to the university's indemnification policy to provide consistency between the policy and the way MSU has been interpreting the language.

Leadership Change

Marti K.S. Heil appointed vice president of University Advancement

University Advancement is welcoming a new leader as its successful $1.7 billion capital campaign wraps up this fall.

Marti Heil, '76, returns to MSU and succeeds Robert Groves, who had helmed the office since 2009 and headed up its latest fundraising campaign. He announced his resignation in July.

Heil, a Lansing native, retired in spring 2017 as vice president for development and alumni relations at Virginia Commonwealth University.

She is already familiar with the Green and White: In addition to earning her advertising degree at MSU, she spent 30 years of her career in University Advancement.

"I'm ecstatic to be returning to Michigan State," she said in a news release.

"The university is completing a very successful capital campaign, Empower Extraordinary, which is fantastic. But there is more work to be done and I'm ready to roll up my sleeves and jump right in."

Groves joined MSU after four years working in development at the University of Michigan, where he provided day-to-day direction for U-M's capital campaign, which raised $3.1 billion and is believed to be the most successful fundraising campaign at a public university at that time.

In February, he'll join the University of Texas at Austin as the senior associate vice president for development.

Kendra Levine brings purpose and passion for the environment to her work driving McDonald's ambitious sustainability initiatives. BY DANIEL P. SMITH

As an eighth-grader in Orlando, Florida, Kendra Levine penned an essay defending climate change as a naturally occurring event.

When her teacher read the young scribe's treatise in front of the class, Levine's stomach turned and her heart sank.

"I didn't want to feel we could be causing [climate change], so I argued we weren't responsible even though the evidence pointed to human impact," Levine said.

That day served as a turning point for Levine, spurring a heightened attentiveness to environmental responsibility that now fuels her professional pursuits. Today, as North American sustainability manager at McDonald's, Levine works to drive continuous improvement in the environmental and social impacts of McDonald's U.S. supply chain, which covers about 14,000 restaurants.

After earning an undergraduate degree in food and resource economics from the University of Florida in 2008, Levine spent three years in Kenya as a program manager with One Acre Fund, an international nonprofit that finances and trains smallholder farmers in Africa. As she monitored and evaluated the organization's efforts, Levine began to contemplate different paths to impact and professional purpose.

Later, while pursuing her master's degree in agricultural, food, and resource economics at MSU, Levine found her answer. If she could work for a large food or agriculture company demanding sustainable practices within its supply chain, she could help power market-driven environmental and social improvements.

"Then, I could help people and the environment simultaneously," said Levine, who earned a master's degree in the MSU College of Agriculture and have as purchasers to affect those upstream," Levine said.

A few short weeks after graduation, Levine landed at McDonald's.

Initially charged to work with all plant-based products, Levine traveled to farms to investigate innovative practices that could be applied across the supply chain, specifically seeking initiatives that were economically, environmentally, and socially sound. She also developed an internal web-based platform hous-

and Natural Resources in 2015. Once clutching thoughts of a career in environmental law or international development, Levine shifted her academic focus to agribusiness, took classes at the Eli Broad College of Business, and interned in MSU's purchasing department as a sustainable sourcing coordinator, where she learned how to present information in a way that influences perception and action.

"Sustainability very much remains about education and the power we ing all of McDonald's sustainable sourcing expectations and policies, an endeavor for which she received McDonald's coveted President's Award.

Today, Levine leads development of McDonald's North American climate strategy, a science-based initiative that aims to reduce greenhouse gas emissions at McDonald's restaurants and within its supply chain by more than 30 percent by 2030. She is also fleshing out guidelines for McCafé Sustainability

Flipping the narrative that "big is bad" and addressing swelling consumer interest in sustainability and environmental stewardship, Levine is committed to ensuring the credibility of McDonald's programs and achieving ambitious goals related to minimizing waste, protecting water resources, improving animal welfare, and more.

"I'm thrilled to be working for a company that has wrapped itself in sustainability, has ownership of this

Surely, the eighth-grade version of Levine would be proud.

A Life on the Road

Michal Kolaczowski is living his dream, touring the world in theater productions including Chicago and Beauty and the Beast and hoping for a big break in New York.

BY DANIEL P. SMITH

It's a crisp December morning in Vancouver, Canada, and Michal Kolaczowski has one thing on his mind: finding a good cup of coffee.

Over Kolaczowski's last four globe-trotting years as a professional performer, hunting for a caffeine fix has become a daily ritual, his way of injecting normalcy into an otherwise abnormal life of hotels and airplanes, taxis, and takeout.

Not that Kolaczowski's complaining. This is, after all, his dream life.

"I haven't worked a day in years," Kolaczowski, '12, said, beaming.

In his latest adventure, the 27-year-old played the role of Fred Casely on the Broadway tour of Chicago, a seven-month, 34-city tour spanning North American cities like Saskatoon and Schenectady, San Antonio and Sioux Falls. Prior to that, the Shelby Township native returned to his home state with performances in Clinton Township, Midland, and Kalamazoo.

"It's always extra special to be back in Michigan," said Kolaczowski, the son of Polish-born professional ballroom dancers. "It's where it all began for me."

And that's where it almost ended.

After an active career in high school theater, Kolaczowski told himself he was done performing when he arrived on the Michigan State campus in fall 2009.

"It seemed time to get on with life," he said.

It was a short-lived promise, however, as Kolaczowski auditioned for the university's fall musical, Rent. Cast in the show, he was sucked back into the performing world. He later appeared in campus productions such as Legally Blonde and Evil Dead, while also singing with the men's glee

York City and entered the professional semester training program at the Broadway Dance Center, an intense five-month program that allowed him to "catch up with those in New York who had musical theater degrees."

He landed his first gigs as a dancer, actor, and singer on Crystal Cruises, quite literally circling the globe, before securing a spot on the national and then international tour of Beauty and the Beast. Kolaczowski club and the campus a cappella group, Spartan Dischords. Along the way, he paired his marketing studies with an “informal” acting degree, picking up theater course textbooks to hone his craft.

“At Michigan State, I was able to develop my being in many different directions all at once, and that's why I'm here today,” Kolaczowski said. “Michigan State allowed me to tune out the noise and follow my instincts.”

“It's those near misses that make that moment you get the job so much bigger,” he said.

Now Kolaczowski, who leverages his Eli Broad College marketing studies to curate his own website and social media presence, said he hopes his next “big break” delivers the ultimate prize: casting in a Broadway show.

“Broadway’s the top of the pyramid,” he said. “I’ve been in New York City for five years now and have paid every bill performing, but there’s no question a Broadway show is the goal.”

Then, of course, he could stop hunting for coffee in unfamiliar cities.

“Yeah,” he said, laughing, “I already know my go-to spots in New York.”

A Gift for Everyone

Robert Manning turned his love and passion for America's National Park System into a career as a researcher and professor. BY TOM KERTSCHER

America's 102-year-old, 84-million-acre National Park System (NPS) is far more than a collection of pretty places to Robert Manning, who arrived at Michigan State on a mission to protect it.

"The national parks are really an important manifestation of democracy. They're the idea that these places are so important that they need to be protected for everyone, not just for a rich or powerful elite," he said.

"They really are icons of American history and geography. We have places that are just so grand and so different from many other countries around the world.

"Everyone, regardless of their wealth or power, is an owner of places like Yosemite, and Yellowstone, and the Grand Canyon. It's an important part of what makes America different," said Manning, who earned a master's and a doctorate in the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources, 1973 and 1975, respectively.

Now a professor emeritus of environment and natural resources at the University of Vermont, he spent 40 years there teaching the history, philosophy, and management of parks, and conducting research for the NPS.

But some of his most important work came during the yearlong sabbaticals he took to live in and do research in places such as Yosemite and Grand Canyon national parks.

"There's really no other way to get familiar with what really goes on in a national park than to spend some time there," he said. "I would use those sabbaticals in my research and teaching. They were great sources of stories and slides and case studies."

Those assignments helped Manning attract as many as 300 undergraduate students to his introductory classes at Vermont and produce 10 books about the parks—as well as, with his wife, Martha, books about "extraordinary hiking."

It all started after Manning, who described himself as a modest undergraduate, entered the U.S. Coast Guard after getting his bachelor's degree in biology at Washington College in Maryland without much of a career plan. That's when he began visiting places such as Yosemite and determined that helping to preserve such parks would be his life's work.

"I really wasn't a very worldly person before that. So, going to some of the national parks in California, in particular, it was just a revelation to me. I got so engaged with it that by the time I left the Coast Guard three and a half years later, I was quite sure what I wanted to do with my life.”

That decision brought him to MSU to study park and recreation resources. Manning said he is grateful to the school because “they really took a chance on me.”

The state of the NPS, of course, remains a concern for Manning.

“One of the big issues that faces the national parks is the capacity at the parks to accommodate the public,” he said, noting that NPS received nearly 331 million visits in 2016, setting a record for the third straight year.

“In one way, that’s a wonderful thing that so many people would be interested in the national parks, but on the other hand it also creates real challenges for the park service,” he said. “How can a park like Yosemite accommodate 4 or 5 million visits a year without damaging the parks or damaging the quality of experience that people are supposed to have?”

“There’s nothing that’s more fundamental in my mind than finding the right balance between use and preservation. That’s one issue that won’t go away.”

Manning won MSU’s Leonard Twardzik Distinguished Alumni Award in 2002.

MSU Libraries hold millions of ways to explore the depth of human knowledge and history, serving as a vital gathering place for information and those who seek it.

While the means through which we acquire and share knowledge are accelerating faster than you can say fiber-optic cable, the importance of information—new and historic—remains an essential part of human life on civic, social, and economic levels, and beyond.

Behold the library, whose noble aim is to remove barriers and make that information, in all its forms, accessible for all. Like the languages it encompasses, a library is a living thing, constantly evolving and adapting to the needs of its time and its patrons.

This year, MSU is welcoming its new university librarian, Joseph Salem Jr., and expressing gratitude to its recently retired veteran director, Cliff Haka, whose vision elevated the library from a respectable collection of holdings to an energized, popular destination that draws students, faculty, and scholars eager to learn, create, and socialize.

There's nothing musty about it. It's the only place on campus where you can experience a 360-degree view inside a working artery, marvel at extremely rare books, grab a latte and a snack to sustain yourself while reading, pet a therapy dog and feast on free donuts during finals week, dive into one of the world's greatest comic book collections, learn the fine points of turf grass, borrow DVDs and CDs from the expansive Rovi Media Collection, or study an amazing group of maps.

But wait, there's more. Join us on an armchair tour.

BY SHIRLEY WAJDA, PHD

I Digital
Scholarship
Lab

Travel through arteries, tour other countries, or go back in time to walk among historic architecture in the pioneering 360-degree dome, part of the new Digital Scholarship Lab.

Digital Scholarship Lab

Welcome to the future. You'll begin your journey in a 10,000-square-foot space worthy of Star Trek's "holodeck." It's formally known as the Digital Scholarship Lab.

The crew of the show's starship USS Enterprise used its holodeck (Holographic Environment Simulator) for recreation. What was science fiction in 1974 becomes reality as a tool for education and research at MSU.

The lab's focal point is the 360-degree immersive visualization room, the first of its kind at a U.S. university. Within its confines, teams can collaborate in research and training, classes can "visit" distant places, and designers can bring their sketches to life.

On top of that, visitors can experience virtual reality. Open to all faculty and students, the lab features a virtual reality room with VR headsets, a dedicated room for digitization projects, offices, instructional space, meeting rooms, and work stations outfitted with high-speed computers and powerful software easily outdoing what Capt. Kirk had at his command.

Opened in February, the Digital Scholarship Lab is the result of a partnership between the College of Arts and Letters and the MSU Libraries. "This state-of-the-art facility will elevate our widely recognized strengths in the digital arts and humanities," Christopher P. Long, dean of the College of Arts and Letters, predicts. "It is bound to be a destination for the best students and faculty from around the world."

Cookery and Food

To paraphrase French lawyer and author Jean Anthelme Brillat-Savarin (1826): We are what we eat. This holds true not only in the senses of health and physique. MSU's Cookery and Food Collection, one of the largest in the nation, tells us what the world's societies ate, and, in so doing, tells us a lot about cultural identity over and through time.

This collection contains more than 25,000 cookbooks dating from the 16th century to the present. Manuscript "receipts" reveal the handing down of dishes from one cook to another. Rarities include Amelia Simmons' American Cookery (1798), the first cookbook published in America. The collection is rich in holdings of African and African-American cookery, charting the influence of West African foodways in the Americas. Community pride is chronicled by the Michigan Cookbook Project, an ongoing program to collect materials published in the state, including cookbooks created by communities, organizations, churches, and individuals.

Industrial food production and kitchen technology continue to change the ways humans grow and purchase, cook and keep, and consume food. The Alan and Shirley Bocker Sliker Culinary Collection features thousands of publications by U.S. companies intent on introducing new foods and new ways of cooking into the American home. (There's always room for JELL-O!)

Faculty Book Collection

Our librarians have long collected multimedia created by faculty and academic staff. The work spans generations. One of the earliest pieces is Shadows from the Walls of Death, by Chemistry Professor Robert C. Kedzie (1823–1902). It's one of 100 albums he filled with 19th-century wallpapers embedded with arsenic. The toxin yielded fashionably vivid colors, especially greens.

Kedzie, a former physician and a member of Michigan's first State Board of Health, understood the element's danger to health and life. He distributed his albums to all state libraries, warning people of the hazardous material. Only four books remain.

Now, books, multimedia creations, musical scores, and recordings by faculty are collected annually. The ever-growing body of work charts MSU's contributions to the world's knowledge. Find the latest additions in the Stanley C. and Selma D. Hollander Faculty Book Collection Alcove.

A trio of 3D printers are available for users to crank out plastic prototypes, models, toys, and other original and existing designs.

Selma D. and Stanley C. Hollander MakeCentral: Makerspace

Some folks read directions. Others pick up one piece and start assembling. And then there are those who want to take those pieces, rewrite the directions, and make something altogether new. It's all good.

In the Main Library's MakeCentral, students and faculty find a supportive environment in which to discover, experiment, collaborate, design, and invent. These communal "makerspaces" are part of what some experts are calling the New Industrial Revolution, in which do-it-yourselfers are using old and new technologies as ways of learning and sharing skills and knowledge (i.e., directions are important).

MakeCentral, like other makerspaces in public and academic libraries across the nation, provides access to tools. Want to publish your own book? MakeCentral staff can help you design and print it. Or you can dabble in such new technologies as 3D printing or borrow a starter kit to learn how programming and a computer's "innards" work together.

MakeCentral is not just a space. It's a new mindset.

Library Makes Finals Week a Little Sweeter with Dogs, Doughnuts

Finals week isn't what it used to be. Not long ago, lack of study space, uncomfortable temperatures, and the occasional stress-induced outburst from students inspired Holly Flynn, outreach librarian, to get creative.

In May 2012, she and a colleague organized a "stress-free zone" in the Main Library. They filled the room with snacks, games, hula hoops, and music to provide pleasant breaks from the strain of finals week. Even though they posted flyers throughout the building, a grand total of two students showed up.

This motivated Flynn and her co-workers to contact other universities to see if they had better ways to support students during the finals crunch. With help from librarians at "that school down the road," Flynn and her colleagues slowly but surely built a legendary finals week event that has become a staple for MSU students.

"With our past experiences, good and bad, we knew that students liked animals, free food, and higher-quality entertainment than hula hoops," Flynn said with a laugh.

She also called on her contacts in the Counseling Center, Career Services, and Admissions offices, who owned therapy dogs.

"They were just bursting to share their comforting pets with our students," she added.

With the help of more strategic marketing, social media, and grassroots outreach, hundreds of students came in to relax with some friendly, furry friends and relieve some exam-week stress.

In December 2014, librarians loaded up book carts with 83 dozen doughnuts, 40 gallons of coffee, and healthy snacks. They wheeled the refreshments around the library that evening.

Surprised students devoured more than 1,000 doughnuts in under an hour. Hence "The Night of A Thousand Donuts," a finals week tradition, was born.

Since then, a week-long schedule of events provides comfort and entertainment throughout the finals rush.

Student employees, outside departments, and Greek life help make it possible and successful. Not to mention valuable donations from MSU Federal Credit Union—alleviating concern that a book budget would be spent on doughnuts.

Turfgrass Information Center

Our football field's natural turfgrass (installed in 2002) is the result of over three centuries of research and experiment by scientists, amateurs, and companies. The Turfgrass Information Center's collection reflects this long history of investigation into the cultivation and care of turf on golf courses and sports fields, parks, lawns, and sod farms, as well as the social and cultural changes these landscapes reflect and foster.

The Center was established in 1984 with the help of the U.S. Golf Association (USGA). MSU turfgrass scientist James B Beard and Libraries Director Richard Chapin had been building the collection since the early 1960s. With the financial support of the USGA, an online database of turfgrass literature was established, providing historical and scientific information to a wide variety of users. The Turfgrass Information Center's collection is the world's largest, with more than 250,000 records.

Comic Art in the Russel B. Nye Popular Culture Collection

"From 'aaugh!' to 'zoinks!'" would be a fitting title of a list of all the comic books, comic strips, fotonovelas, graphic novels, and related materials in the Comic Art Collection. But holy numbers, Batman! The collection of over 300,000 items is the largest of its kind. Its Green Lantern-like strengths are in American, European, and Latin American holdings, but its collecting scope is international.

The collection was established in 1970 by Russel B. Nye (1913–1993), Department of English, a pioneer in the scholarly study of popular culture and the university's only Pulitzer Prize winner. The Russel B. Nye Popular Culture Collection is also rich in magazines beyond comics that parents often forbade children to read: think confession, crime, and scandal magazines, romance and western dime novels, and science fiction. What's more, it also houses "appropriate" literature, in the form of Sunday-school books, textbooks, and children's literature, dating from the 19th century.

Pac-Man to Pokémon. Hello, Dolly! to Hello Kitty. Louis Armstrong to Led Zeppelin. The library is home to the Rovi Media Collection, the largest of its kind in an American library.

Donated in 2015 by Rovi Corp., this collection numbers over 850,000 items, including CDs, DVD and Blu-ray movies, and video games produced since the early 1990s. The gaming collection—numbering over 17,000 items—represents entertainment systems from Atari to Zodiac and is the largest known library collection of its kind worldwide. Whether enthusiasts or researchers, patrons may borrow games to play in the library's comfy Video Game Labs.

In addition, the Rovi Media Collection is a one-of-a-kind resource for game designers and developers, musicians, film historians, and cultural studies scholars. It's so new that professional cataloging and processing standards don't easily apply. MSU's librarians are creating new pathways in the 21st century's Information Age.

9 Map Library

Every MSU freshman has uttered this phrase: "Excuse me, could you tell me where ...?" Campus maps have saved generations of Spartans on their first days of classes and represent the many changes to the campus' landscape.

MSU's Map Library holds more than 250,000 sheet maps (dating back to the 17th century), 14,000 folded geologic maps, and 4,000 atlases, gazetteers, and other maps that show how geographical knowledge has been and continues to be drawn, debated, and distributed. The Map Library collects in all areas, but is especially strong in North and Latin America, Africa, and Asia.

Footpaths to Freeways: The Evolution of Michigan Road Maps traces the changes in traveling through Michigan, from territorial roads to Google Maps and more.

Posters like this challenge viewers to rethink perceptions of the illegal aliens label.

César E. Chávez Collection/Colección César E. Chávez

"The end of all education should surely be service to others," César E. Chávez (1927–1993) said. A Mexican-American farm worker, his formal education was cut short. But he never stopped learning and pushing for better working conditions. In 1962, he founded the National Farm Workers Association—now the United Farm Workers (UFW).

His office at the labor union's headquarters housed hundreds of books, ranging from philosophy to the history of unions.

Our César E. Chávez Collection reflects the leader's cultural roots and commitment to human rights, labor activism, education, the arts, and a belief in non-violence.

You'll find written works, voice and video titles, educational comic books, and the Illegal Superheroes Wanted Posters, part of a series that includes the Superman poster shown.

Chávez toured Michigan in the 1970s and 1980s, finding strong support for UFW boycotts, strikes, and programs. In 2017, the Lansing City Council renamed part of Grand River Avenue in Old Town as César E. Chávez Avenue.

G. Robert Vincent Voice Library

In 1912, a fearless 14-year-old borrowed a cylinder recording device from a pal to capture a message by a prominent American citizen. That citizen was Bull Moose Party presidential candidate Theodore Roosevelt. The pal was inventor Thomas Edison's son Charles. And the tenacious teen was George Robert Vincent (1898–1985). It sparked Vincent's lifelong passion: immortalizing the words of figures, from the famous to the otherwise unfamiliar.

Fifty years later, MSU accepted Vincent's gift of 8,000 sound recordings, leading to the establishment of the G. Robert Vincent Voice Library. "Print stands for the word," Vincent said in 1965, "but it never is, it never can be the word itself. Only the spoken voice can bring the word fully to life." (Anyone who has ever misinterpreted an email's intent truly understands this.) Today the collection, one of the largest of its kind, numbers over 250,000 items, including the voices of more than 500,000 individuals dating back to 1888.

As Vincent did, the librarians and technicians of the voice library transfer sound recordings into new formats, increasing patrons' access. You too may listen to Vincent's first recording of Theodore Roosevelt and the voices of an astounding number of figures from times gone by. ## More Special Collections

On the first floor of the Main Library is a spacious and proverbial Wunderkammer, a “wonder chamber” or “cabinet of curiosities.” In the 16th century, Europeans began creating such private collections of natural and human-made wonders, putting order to and making available the world’s knowledge.

Libraries today continue this important work.

Perhaps the closest comparison to Europeans’ early compendiums is known as the Libraries’ Special Collections. Established in 1962, it holds unique and rare works, extending their lives for future generations.

Many of the items you’ve read about in the preceding pages are housed within Special Collections.

But there are many other groupings under that umbrella.

Here are but a few of the additional collections:

AMERICAN RADICALISM COLLECTION

The American Radicalism Collection, established in the 1950s with materials from the Communist Party of the USA, has expanded to cover radical movements and thought on both the Right and the Left. With more than 17,000 books, pamphlets, zines, posters, and more, the collection is particularly strong in materials about 20th-century movements and groups, from the Ku Klux Klan of the 1920s and 1930s to the Black Panthers, and from the Trotskyite Socialist Workers Party to the 1960s-era anti-war movement.

AFRICANA COLLECTION

The Africana Collection is one of the largest in the United States—a collection that is not just comprehensive but peerless. It originated in the 1960s to help sustain MSU faculty working on and with those living on the African continent.

MSU partnered with the University of Nigeria Nsukka. Since then, the compendium has grown in both number and breadth of subjects.

Books, journals, maps, films, archives, and ephemera help sustain research, teaching, and outreach by the university’s large and active African Studies community.

It is especially robust in materials from the post-colonial period and builds on the strengths of popular culture and radicalism.

Cookbooks, broadsheet newspapers, protest posters, and political and campaign items from numerous African nations are preserved in perpetuity.

Some of the intellectual property—such as papers by retired African studies professors and numerous activists—cannot be found anywhere else.

Did you know this year marks the 40th anniversary of MSU’s divestment from apartheid-related companies in South Africa?

MSU was the first American university to do so.

LBGTQ+ COLLECTION

The LGBTQ+ Collection was one of the first of its kind in the world when it was established in the late 1970s.

Today, its holdings include popular literature, periodicals, rare books, and archival collections—giving voice to LGBTQ+ individuals and groups.

Magazines, entertainment guides, newspapers, newsletters, and pride guides from across the U.S. and around the globe cover a rainbow of issues, from civil rights and social movements to persecution and acceptance.

VETERINARY MEDICINE HISTORICAL COLLECTION

It’s just horse sense that a veterinary collection was established soon after the Michigan Agricultural College was founded. A century later, J. Fred Smithcors, professor of anatomy in the College of Veterinary Medicine, turned his attention to the collection. He found some 200 books published before 1950. In 1957, Smithcors acquired the Beaudette Collection of more than 250 rare books, manuscripts, and incunabula, which are pamphlets or broadside newspapers printed in Europe before 1501.

YEAR OF AFRICA

The collection has grown to more than 1,500 items, making it one of the nation's finest. Included in the collection is Elemens d'Hippiatrique by Claude Bourgelat, the founder of the world's first school of veterinary medicine in Lyons, France.

MSU also has the only known copy of the first edition (1547) of Libro De Albeyteria, a veterinary manual by Francisco de la Reyna, who theorized the circulation of blood 80 years before William Harvey's description of the circulatory system.

Antiques & Art Books

Sure, some of our oldest books may look like they're on loan from Hogwarts School; however they're crucial to understanding how we've arrived at where we are today. If civilization is built on accumulating knowledge and sharing cultural experiences, then antique books are glimpses into how things played over centuries. And in a new first-floor seminar room, visitors may engage with such gems as a wealthy Parisian family's 1480s-era hand-lettered, colorfully painted Book of Hours, evidence of religious piety. Or patrons can leaf through Walt Whitman's 1855 Leaves of Grass. In addition, the library houses contemporary artists' creations that challenge the very idea of what a book is and how it looks. Professor Liam Brockey's History of the Book class has been introducing students to the vast holdings every fall for the last three years. Brockey and his students use Special Collections as a kind of learning laboratory, tracing the development of culture—Western and Eastern alike—through published materials. The library's conservation unit helps ensure the treasured holdings may be safely handled and repaired when needed. This vital work safeguards the cherished collection so Spartans of the future—decades, even centuries down the line—will have the same opportunities as we do today.

GLOBAL SALAD: FAMINE FOODS By Cathleen Casey

Botanical names of various plants eaten by people during famines are written on paper strips. The vegetation is low in nutritional value but when ingested gives a sensation of being full—despite the fact that the plants can cause cramps or diarrhea.

Library History Timeline

A meeting room off the university's original library, 1888.

1855

MSU Libraries starts with a 200-volume collection with the founding of the Agricultural College of the State of Michigan. The library was housed in a single reading room on the third floor of College Hall, MSU's first classroom building, which has since been demolished.

1916

The library collection grows to more than 30,000 volumes, and additional space was created by excavating underneath the building.

Moving books gives hands-on learning a new meaning.

1933

MSU Library ranks seventh in the nation for its extensive collections in botany and horticulture.

■ DID YOU KNOW?

The Libraries boast over 8 million books, journals, videos, maps, and more

1963

The collection reaches 1 million volumes and would exceed 2 million volumes 10 years later.

The old card catalogs are as obsolete as eight-track tapes.

1881

The library moves to Linton Hall, MSU's oldest standing academic building.

The Experimental Station operates the inaugural library.

1925

After six years of construction and $300,000 of government-funded money, a new library building opens its doors. Today, that building houses the MSU Museum. The library occupied the building until 1955.

■ ASK A LIBRARIAN

“If we don’t have it, we can probably get it for you.”

John Hannah boosted construction of the third library building.

1955

In less than 25 years, the library outgrows its building. A new building is constructed and student in long lines move boxes of books to the new library, which stands today.

The library offers online access to some of the world's finest archives, collections, and images.

■ DID YOU KNOW?

Reference help is offered 24/7 during fall and spring semesters

The Digital Scholarship Lab includes a dome in which 360-degree images are projected, creating novel ways of learning.

1989

The library catalogue goes online, making book searches much quicker than using a card catalogue.

Library hours were extended until after dark.

1999

The library begins operating around the clock during fall and spring semesters.

2018

The Digital Scholarship Lab, the first of its kind at an American university, opens on the second floor.

Early 1990s

With the booming growth of the internet, the library was able to dramatically expand its range of services and materials.

■ DID YOU KNOW?

Author readings, film screenings, and game nights are also held in the library

2009

The collection reaches 5 million volumes.

MY SPACE

Before students were treated to finals week doughnuts and orange juice, they would sometimes find their own reading nooks in which to enjoy a good book.

New on Campus?

Alums provide friendly faces and helping hands on move-in day

I have lived near Michigan State University almost all of my life. Over these many years, I have seen so much change take place on this great campus.

But one thing that has remained constant is the feeling that settles in each year on move-in day.

As you walk through East Lansing and across campus, you can't help but feel a sense of hope and optimism as new students move to MSU for the very first time.

As this year's move-in weekend approached, I looked forward to experiencing that feeling from a new perspective as interim executive director of the Alumni Association.

Peter, '73, and Sherry, '72, '74, Trezise of Okemos have their own perspective as loyal alumni who have been generously helping new groups of Spartans move into their residence halls for the past six years.

Stationed outside of Butterfield Hall, Peter and Sherry stood in the hot August sun greeting parents and students, helping them all feel a little less apprehensive as they began a new life chapter here at MSU.

They're no strangers to the move-in experience.

In addition to having MSU degrees, they sent both of their daughters to Michigan State.

They have also volunteered at alumni reunion days and are loyal donors to WKAR and the Wharton Center.

While Peter and Sherry are outstanding examples of what real Spartans look like, they are by no means unique.

Every year, thousands of loyal alumni and friends give back a portion of their time and their treasure in support of the amazing work that is taking place here at Michigan State. I am honored to have met the Trezises.

I am humbled knowing that there are thousands of other Spartans just like them who are out there making a difference and supporting MSU each and every day.

A NEW BEGINNING
2018 Boston Spartans
Endowed Scholarship
recipient, Kelsey Olen, hopes to become a pediatrician.

Stepping up for Students

Boston Spartans help prepare future students to leave the nest

Spartan alumni clubs connect former students with one another through events and group activities. It's another important role clubs play in the greater Spartan community—supporting future and current students.

Take the MSU Boston Alumni club, for instance. As incoming students prepare to leave their families and lives in Massachusetts, the Boston Spartans host a fun-filled send-off party.

Students and parents have the opportunity to connect with Spartan alums while enjoying great food and fun games.

It's a great way for incoming students and their families to grow their Spartan roots even before they arrive in East Lansing.

In addition, the club members recently met a big fundraising goal to support their scholarship for future Spartans living in Massachusetts.

Donations to MSU's annual Give Green Day, T-shirt sales, and raffles helped fill the coffers.

All admitted freshmen from Massachusetts are automatically nominated for the Boston Spartans Endowed Scholarship.

Each year, the Boston club chooses one outstanding Massachusetts student to receive the award. The 2018 recipient, Kelsey Olen, will soon complete her first semester as a Spartan.

After earning her degree in human biology, Kelsey hopes to become a pediatrician.

TRAVEL WISE
The Esnoaga, or Snoge, is just one of many educational destinations on MSU's Dutch Waterways alumni cruise tour.

Travel With a Twist

Spartan Pathways Travel Program offers trips for alumni and friends

Earlier this year I visited Amsterdam's Portuguese Synagogue (otherwise known as Esnoaga or Snoge), a huge place of worship built in the 17th century for Sephardic Jews.

A few months later, while visiting Portugal, I learned some related history—how Jews found a home in Amsterdam after being expelled from Spain and then Portugal.

These educational encounters took place while I was enjoying two separate MSUAA tours, Dutch Waterways and the Romance of the Douro.

Learning is indeed one of the greatest by-products of international travel. I know it well because after retiring four years ago, I've taken advantage of many travel opportunities.

I've opted for many MSUAA tours because, in my experience, they offer an educational component that goes beyond sight-seeing.

The MSUAA tends to select tours that are well packaged, expertly guided, and proven products. Of course, with MSUAA tours you get to travel with fellow Spartans, with whom you make memories to last a lifetime.

As a frequent traveler, I've learned how to comparison shop on travel, and eight of my last 10 international tours have been through the MSUAA.

As soon as the MSUAA travel brochure comes out, I scan it for trips of interest, and make my priority choices from them.

Alumni who are interested in travel but have not yet experienced an alumni tour would benefit greatly from these trips. With over 44 tours to choose from for 2019, there's a perfect adventure just for you. MSUAA travel can take you to a variety of places in Europe and even Antarctica—you decide.

TRIPS FOR YOUNG ALUMS

Did you know that MSUAA's Spartan Pathways Travel Program provides trips curated for young alumni? Graduates from the ages of 22-35 may take advantage of a few trips every year to connect with alumni in their age group. Young alumni are in for the adventure of a lifetime. Activities range from wine tasting in Portugal to zip-lining over the rainforest in Costa Rica. Travelers are also invited to take a closer look at various film sites for the popular HBO series Game of Thrones in Croatia. Or, some may prefer a snowy New Year's Eve celebration in the mountains of Innsbruck, Austria. From Europe to Costa Rica, these tours are priced below $2,000. Spartan Pathways even offers an Essential Europe tour for recently graduated seniors. The class of 2019 is invited to experience eight countries in under 30 days. Check out the website below for more details.

SPARTANS SHOW UP

Clockwise, from top left: 1. International students enjoy meeting and taking photographs with our iconic Sparty mascot before the official start of the fall semester. 2. An MSU volunteer with the Center for Service-Learning and Civic Engagement accepts donated school supplies for area youngsters during a Fill the Bus event in September. 3. Microwave ovens, laptops, printers, and snacks are just a few of the comforts from home that students outfit their dorm rooms with. 4. Members of the MSU Horticulture Association display their fall bounty in the October Homecoming Parade. 5. Oregon and Southwest Washington Spartans hiked the Mt. Hood Timberline Trail in July.

Mouth-watering, savory cheese, handmade on campus. They don't call this place "Moo U" for nothing. We Spartans know cheese, and the handcrafted chunks from the MSU Dairy Store are A-1. Our cheeses make brilliant gifts for friends and family (alumni or not), and they're perfect for entertaining, or kept all to yourself! Plus, they can be ordered online or by phone and shipped anywhere in the country. We have eight delectable varieties—all with Spartan-ized packaging—that can be ordered singly and in special gift bundles. Support your alma mater and your appetite—order some cheese from the MSU Dairy Store today!

1950s

DENNIS L. BLUE, '57 (Social Science), has published his memoir entitled, Running the Good Race, A Story of Faith, Ford and Fishing, recounting his life as a corporate executive, missionary pilot, and fisherman.

1960s

EDWARD DEEB, '60 (Communication Arts and Sciences), was recognized by the Michigan Department of Natural resources by naming a street on Belle Isle after him in honor of his lifetime achievement. He has helped improve the Detroit area in numerous ways, including the creation of Detroit Youth Day.

ELIZABETH B. UNGER, '61 (Engineering, Honors College), MS '63 (Natural Science), has had a complex of buildings named after her by Kansas State University.

JOHN F. SCHAEFER, '65 (Communication Arts and Sciences), JD '69 (Law), has been recognized by DBusiness Magazine in its 2018 Top Lawyer list under the category of Family Law. He delivered the MSU College of Law's commencement address for the law school's 2018 spring and summer graduates.

VIRGINIA L. MATUREN, '67 (Nursing), has received the Distinguished Service Award – Community Volunteer from the University of Michigan Health Systems, Cancer Center. Maturen has volunteered at the Patient Education Resource Center in the Cancer Center for the past 10 years.

MICHAEL E. GERHARDT, '69 (Business), has published a book with his six grandchildren, ages 6 to 14, entitled, The Incredible Cousins and the Magic Caboose.

1970s

JANE DIVITA WOODY, PhD '70 (Arts and Letters), has published a new book, Lucky Girl: Growing up Italian-American in Appalachia: A Memoir. Her book offers a loving testimony to parents, family, community, and life in a small West Virginia coal town.

KEITH A. ASHMUS, '71 (James Madison, Honors College), MA '72 (Social Science), a Frantz Ward partner, has been honored at the inaugural Crain's Cleveland Business C-Suite Gala for his work as board counsel for Vocational Guidance Services. He was also recently appointed to the Regulatory Fairness Board as a representative from Region V, covering Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, and Minnesota.

CAROL E. SPRING, MA '72 (Education), current Alumnae Panhellenic president of Tallahassee, volunteered with the MSU Panhellenic and her sorority Alpha Xi Delta while a graduate resident advisor in Wilson Hall. Today, Patricia Scott, '75 (Education), and Carol work together to foster women's leadership through sorority and Panhellenic activities in Tallahassee. As two retired MSU grads, they have enjoyed sharing this connection since so few Spartans live in the area!

DEBORAH STEVENS, '73 (Agriculture and Natural Resources), recently released two books titled The Serpent's Disciple and

Holy Predator, both set in Italy and based on factual events.

WANDA HERNDON, '74, MA '79 (Both in Communication Arts and Sciences) '18 (Honorary Degree), who has been instrumental in building the Starbucks brand, was selected to speak at MSU's Spring Convocation on May 4. She also received a Distinguished Alumni Award from MSU's College of Engineering.

ROBERT WILLIAMS, MA '74, PhD '80 (Both in Social Science), will be selling Hardy Kiwis at the West Seattle Farmers Market in October. There are four types of kiwis available for purchase, including the "Michigan State" variety, complete with a Spartan green color.

DENISE CRITTENDON, '75 (Communication Arts and Sciences), recently began publishing The Xtras, a group of graphic novel comic books about preteen superheroes who live alternative lifestyles and have mental-health-related characteristics. This series' non-traditional approach is intended to empower young people who feel disenfranchised.

MICHIGAN STATE UNIVERSITY

An Open Letter to Spartans

We have had many challenges as a University in the past months. We are grateful to Interim President Engler for his service and for the many changes he has made to ensure safety for our students and vitality for our university. The next essential step is to name a permanent President. We need your help.

A search committee has been named and a search firm has been hired: Storbeck, Pimental and Associates. Now comes the work of identifying high-quality candidates to lead our great university into the next decade. We ask that you actively communicate with alumni in your network with two goals in mind.

One goal is to identify the key factors the search committee should consider. We are currently meeting with groups on campus with three key topics.

A: What are the key attributes we should seek in a new President?

B: What challenges will she need to address given the many changes and pressures facing higher education in general?

C: What are the key strengths of MSU that s/he should build upon? We need your input. Please offer your thoughts at www.msu.edu/presidentialsearch.

The second critical goal is to identify candidates for President. We do not have a preferred candidate. We are open to all nominations. A principled and effective leader with deep experience in research-intensive higher education would be attractive. A non-traditional candidate who has a demonstrated record of accomplishment and a deep appreciation for higher education would also be attractive. Please scour your network and offer names. Here we ask that you share your nominations with our search firm. We do this because we want to protect the privacy of all candidates. You may share nominations directly with Shelly Storbeck: s.storbeck@storbecksearch.com.

Thank you, in advance, for the work you will do to help us find our next President. It is a critical task at this time in the life of the university we all love. Go Green!

“Here at MSU, it’s like a gateway to opportunity.”

*Joyce-Zoe Farley,
University Enrichment
Fellow, College of Arts and Letters*

Tuesday, November 27 is a global day of philanthropy.

At MSU, we are calling it Give Green Day and are working to raise support for students.

JOIN
thousands of alumni and friends

Last year, more than 3,800 Spartans came together on Give Green Day
to fund scholarships,
field experiences,
emergency aid, library resources, and more—all to help students succeed.

“This community really cares about
you. They want to help you to success.”

Thiramet Sotthiyapai, RISE Mentor, College of Engineering and Honors College

ARE YOU READY TO MAKE A DIFFERENCE?

Spartans will come together to give back and make a difference for current and future Spartans.

Farewell Cecil Mackey Jr. (1929-2018)

Life of late MSU president celebrated at East Lansing's People's Church in September

MSU's 16th president, Mackey served from 1979 to 1985. Colleagues described him as a soft-spoken Southern gentleman and a man of principle. An avid runner and tennis player, he and his wife, Clare, remained in East Lansing following his tenure and Mackey continued teaching economics courses at MSU. He died Feb. 8.

Libraries
MICHIGAN STATE UNIVERSITY

Millions of research materials find a home in MSU Libraries that support your fellow Spartans. How can we free up valuable room in the Main Library for innovative and communal spaces that will create the library of the future?

MSU library staff Susan Graff and Josh Maki orchestrated the solution. Peek inside MSU's 65,000 square foot Remote Storage, where 2.4 million items are stacked in towering shelves and 4,500 items get checked in and out each semester.

What Susan and Josh see is more than a warehouse. They see a state-of-the-art, high-density repository designed to preserve and house our printed materials for decades to come.

When our mission is to support every Spartan at this world-renowned research institution through the preservation and dissemination of knowledge, planning ahead isn't just a personal preference. It guides everything we do.

*Invest in the future.
Support MSU Libraries' annual fund.*
